Traditional Foods of Ilokanos

Wendelyn R. Talbo
University of Northern Philippines

Keywords: ilokano foods, foods' value, ilokano heritage, ilokano culture

Abstract

This study aimed to discover the traditional foods of Ilokanos in the Province of Ilocos Sur. Employing a phenomenological design, in-depth interview with 27 elders, and triangulated by observations was conducted. The study found out that Ilokanos, from all walks of life, still embraced the importance of traditional foods such as buga, karot, ballaiba, papait, and tabtaba. These foods served as rice substitutes, especially in crisis times, believing these have nutritious values to satisfy daily energy requirements. Ilokanos practice easy ways to prepare these traditional foods for consumption. The traditional foods for Ilokanos are seasonal, the community knows how to preserve for future utilization to be appreciated
